At the School of Social Innovation we dream of communities of dedicated and well-equipped people participating in caring for and healing of the ills of this world. To build such communities, innovative social leaders are needed to build and develop the human and social capital of our nation.

Through a combination of five distinct online executive short courses we aim to train social innovation leaders who are committed and prepared to devote their lives and competencies to inclusively improve society regardless of social standing, wealth, culture, ethnicity or privilege.

The School of Social Innovation believes that continuous social innovation is needed to ensure that effective, well-researched and context-specific solutions to the needs of individuals, groups, and communities are developed and implemented.

The five executive short courses presented, if there is sufficient demand, are:
